About us

PwC is a global network of firms in 150 countries with an extensive record in international development, having delivered diverse projects in challenging and hostile environments.

We have a permanent Framework Management Unit to respond to requests for assistance under this agreement and have created a strong team of partnering organisations with shared values and complementary expertise in order to meet the precise needs of the framework.

We provide integrated services in the fields of security sector reform, justice reform and peacebuilding by combining conflict sensitivity tools with rigorous risk assessment systems, along with monitoring and evaluation frameworks to aid the successful implementation of projects. We have offices, projects and networks in all conflict-affected environments around the world.

Our partnering organisations in this framework are:

British Institute of International and Comparative Law (BIICL)	The British Institute of International and Comparative Law (BIICL) continues a mission first begun in 1895 to advance the understanding of international and comparative law and to promote the rule of law and human rights in international affairs.
Channel Research	Channel Research advises organisations in conflict sensitive approaches to community investment, conducting feasibility studies, baseline surveys, public consultations and impact assessments in high risk environments. .
Control Risks	A global risk consultancy with 28 worldwide offices, Control Risks , works in the most challenging and complex environments helping governments, NGOs and international business meet their objectives.
International Action Network on Small Arms	IANSA is a global civil society network that works to reduce the proliferation and misuse of small arms and light weapons. Its membership comprises around 700 organisations working in nearly 100 countries.
International Foundation for Election Systems	IFES currently operates in over 20 countries. Its staff comprises 150 professionals from 25 countries who deliver projects for international and bilateral donor organizations including DFID, the UN, USAID and OSCE.
The Law Society of England and Wales	The Law Society's International Department works with governments, bar associations and NGOs to improve human rights, the development of sound legal frameworks and to support the rule of law and access to justice.
The National Police Improvement Agency	NPIA develops effective, democratic policing by identifying good practice and sharing this knowledge internationally. Through NPIA, we have access to the human resources of every police force in the United Kingdom.
The Transitional Justice Institute (TJI)	The TJI at the University of Ulster examines how legal institutions assist the move from conflict to peace. Its expertise covers governance, human rights and criminal justice reform – as well as the role played by gender.

Our team offers diverse technical expertise combined with the operational capacity to manage this framework agreement effectively and efficiently. Amongst our core strengths, we offer:

- Personnel with the experience, linguistic skills and cultural sensitivity necessary to work effectively in the environments in which assignments under this framework may be implemented;
- Self sufficient processes for deployment to the most hostile environments and the resources to organise logistics in-country and to provide full backstopping support;
- High standards of quality assurance, which match or exceed BS or ISO accreditation and rigorous project, programme and financial management tools and expertise to offer the best value for money.
- PwC also holds DFID's Public Administration Reform framework, enabling us to closely coordinate activities where possible and appropriate.

Our experience

We are committed to bringing a professional, flexible and supportive approach to the framework in order to ensure its success for all stakeholders. Too broad to set out here in full detail, examples of our relevant work include:

- PwC's support the police in DRC's 2006 elections and subsequent ongoing work training the country's judiciary in a complex and ambitious programme of reform, helping it achieve independence.
- The security sector reform expertise of our team which can be utilised to provide a comprehensive, integrated solution across the various strands of SSR. Control Risks, for example, has conducted complex SSR projects for government and non governmental clients across the world including Latin America, Sierra Leone and Afghanistan.
- Channel Research's assistance to the African Peace Facility for the African Union and the European Commission; its assessment, project formulation and implementation of the national demobilization and reintegration Programme in Chad; and review of the EU crisis management capabilities.
